

Observations from analyzing the latest 100 tweets of news feeds:

- Mostly, the news makers tend to create neutrally colored news
- The absolute average compound of the tweets is very low, and can balance between positive and negative, but remains insufficient
- Polarity may change drastically from tweet to tweet while the news maker is making a retweet. Should it be excluded from analysis or does this trend has a purpose? We need to look into this in more details